Patricia Hill Collins is Distinguished Professor of Sociology at the University of Maryland, College Park. Her books include Black Feminist Thought: Knowledge, Consciousness, and the Politics of Empowerment; Black Sexual Politics: African Americans, Gender, and the New Racism; Fighting Words: Black Women and the Search for Justice; and From Black Power to Hip Hop: Racism, Nationalism, and Feminism. She has published articles in professional journals such as Ethnic and Racial Studies, Signs, Sociological Theory, Hypatia, Social Problems, Ethnicities, and Black Scholar, as well as in numerous edited volumes. She has recently finished editing, with Margaret Andersen, the seventh edition of Race, Class, and Gender: An Anthology, a reader widely used in classrooms in over 200 colleges and universities. Her newest book, Another Kind of Public Education: Race, Schools, the Media, and Democratic Possibilities is currently in production and will be published by Beacon Press this spring.

Professor Collins has taught at several institutions, held editorial positions with professional journals, lectured widely in the United States and abroad, served in many capacities in professional organizations, and has acted as consultant for a number of community organizations. In 2008, she became the 100th President of ASA, the first African American woman elected to this position in the organization’s 104-year history.
